BOY KICKED BY A HORSE

STRUCK IN THE SIDE BY ANIMALS HOOF AND IS BADLY INJURED WEDNESDAY MORNING.

HORSE WAS BEING LED

An accident that might have been fatal and at best is very serious occurred on the square at the Central National Bank corner this morning when Warner McCurry, son of J. A. McCurry, of College Avenue was kicked by a horse. Glenn Hammond was riding one horse and leading another when the McCurry boy, who is about twelve years old, attempted to pass the led horse. The animal kicked, the hoofs striking the boy in the side and knocking him down.

He was at once taken to his home by James Hurst, who had a vehicle hitched near the scene of the accident. Although the boy suffered greatly for a time it is not believed that any serious results will follow.

The Most Critical Buyers

Of Wearing Apparel are Women

In ready-to-wear garments, women insist on something more than the "looks - good - while - its - new" kind. They're thinking of the end of the season as well as the beginning.

That's why the Perfection Shirt Waist
has made such headway.

The women insist on correct style, a perfect fit, good tailoring, high quality, full value, and they find it in the PERFECTION.

TORE BANDAGES OFF WOUNDS

George Benefiel, a barber at Russellville, in North Putnam County, attempted to commit suicide Monday evening. He first gashed himself on the throat with a razor and then shot himself in the neck. It was some time before he received assistance, as he threatened to shoot any one who entered the shop. After the wounds were dressed he took the bandages off twice. He is a "dope fiend" and has had family troubles. He will recover.

NEGRO SUSPECT ARRESTED HERE

MAN BELIEVED TO HAVE ROB-
BED SAFE AT BEDFORD
OF $398 IN CASH.

A DETECTIVE FOLLOWS HIM

After having followed Harrison Allen, colored for several days, J. M. Dentz, formerly chief of police at Terre Haute, but now in detective work, Tuesday located the negro here. The detective came here from Bedford Tuesday afternoon and immediately looked up Marshal Johns.

Dentz was so worn out from his chase of several days, that he gave the marshal the description of the negro and asked him to arrest him. The detective had traced the negro to Greencastle and was sure that he was here.

The negro was wanted in connection with a $398 robbery in Bedford. He was coachman there for A. W. Stone, manager of the Debertson Stone Company. A week ago Saturday the safe in the company office was robbed.

The next day the negro got drunk and "flushed" a large roll of bills. He also took a drive in his employers rig and smashed it up. He paid for having the rig repaired and left town.

Immediately he was suspected of the robbery and the detective was put on the case. He followed him to Terre Haute, back to Bedford, then to Mitchell and again back to Terre Haute. He learned where the negro had spent about $100.

From Terre Haute the negro came to Greencastle arriving on Tuesday morning. Why he came to Greencastle is not known. After the detective arrived here and gave the marshal the description of the negro he went back to Terre Haute instructing Johns to arrest the man. Last evening the marshal found the negro on the square and arrested him. Only $22 was found on him when he was searched.

Today the detective returned and put the negro through the "sweating process" but was unable to get a confession from him. Although Mr. Dentz is certain that the negro is guilty he is afraid he cannot make a case against him. He probably will release the negro this afternoon.

The negro declares that the money he has been spending had been saved out of his weekly wages.

THE DROUGHT PLAYS HAVOC

DRY AND HOT WEATHER
THREATENS CROP PROS-PECTS OVER ENTIRE NORTHWEST.

POTATOES FEEL WEATHER

While the city has been complaining of the hot weather and the city people have betaken themselves to palm leaf fans and the soda fountain, the farmer has other things to think of than keeping cool. All that farm science has taught of fighting drought has been brought into play. Never before has the "dust mulch" been given a trial such as it is having this year. Corn fields have been cultivated, rolled and cultivated again till the surface is like the dust of a well used roadway. And this has produced effects. Where carefully done there is still moist earth close to the surface and the corn is growing. Some have made the mistake of rolling the ground and leaving the surface flat. This allows rapid evaporation from the surface and is injurious. The only advantage of rolling is to aid in tilling the soil and reducing it to powder. It should be left rough and loose.

The tillage has not been possible on some crops, however, and the result is now seen in the rapid injury to oats, wheat and potatoes. The latter crop is an especially sufferer. One farmer who grows potatoes extensively declares that the early potato crop has been cut a half by the hot weather of the past three days and the late crop will be an absolute failure unless rain comes speedily. Tillage has aided this condition somewhat, but the injury has been done in spite of all tillage. Oats in many fields will not be high enough to cut, while in others a fair crop is promised, the latter being the case on fields rich in humus. Crop conditions as a whole are very unfavorable.

$1175 DAMAGES ARE ASKED

Suit has been filed in the circuit court of Putnam County to collect $1,175 from the Cincinnati Hamilton and Dayton Railroad Company for damages alleged done to the meadow and crops of the plaintiff by the defendant railroad. The complaint alleges that in 1908, the dry year, the railroad company negligently allowed grass and weeds to accumulate along the right-of-way of the defendant, and that later these weeds took fire and communicated the fire to the plaintiffs property, burning some forty acres of his timothy meadow and hay. It is alleged that the hay was worth $775 and that the meadow was damaged to the amount of $400. The plaintiff asks damages in these amounts. The attorneys for the plaintiff are J. H. James and Jackson Boyd.

DAYS ON THE BRINY DEEP

EXPERIENCES OF AN OBSERV-ING PASSENGER UPON ONE
OF THE GREAT OCEAN
STEAM SHIPS.

ICE BERGS AND SEA STORMS

Mid-Ocean, S. S. Lake Manitoba,
June 1, 1910.

Editor Star-Democrat:

Since my last we have had varied experiences, and but little sea sickness on board. The sea has been calm and sensitive stomachs have not been troubled. For thirty-six hours in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and in the Straits of Belle Isle we were enveloped, overshadowed and enwrapped in one of the sea fogs you read about, but cannot imagine realistically without experiencing one of them. This sea fog is densely moist and very drearily thick; it can be seen and felt; and it is sufficiently solid to cut with a knife. During the time that our vessel was befogged the fog siren was sounded every three minutes; its voice is strenuously loud, extremely harsh, and so far reaching are its sound waves that vessels miles away hear and answer and redouble their watchfulness to the end that no collisions may occur. Yesterday morning when we awoke and took our "tub," and went on deck for morning exercise, consisting of a walk around and around the promenade deck, our eyes were greeted with a sight of the shores of Labrador on the left, with its hills snow clad and bleak, and on our right was the coast of New Foundland, while at divers places in the Straits of Belle Isle, which divide these two lands, ice bergs were in view, greatly to the delight of all who had never seen such before. There were also some whales plainly in view at times, playfully sporting in the water and these also proved a drawing card.

One of the sights on ship board for early risers is holey stonings and scrubbery of the ship's decks, and the washing of other exposed portions of the vessel; the sailors do this work and are lavish in the use of water, hence they perform their work in bare feet. One lady of our party saw this performance for the first time a few mornings ago, and gave it much attention and serious consideration, and summed up the result as follows: "I think the feet of the sailors are full of expression; they are not small and cute; they are rather broad and flat, but the joints are so large and well developed and strong appearing, especially the joint of the big toe, that without looking higher or searching farther, you are impressed with the fact that you are in the presence of a man, a real man." Thus was the subject exhausted. During the last two days we have met and passed many vessels engaged in local trade as well as the Trans-Atlantic Trade, and these meetings and passages are the excitement and interest of the fleeting hours. Last night, while a party of three ladies and one man were unraveling the mysteries of Bridge, a Marconigram was brought to one of the ladies of the party, and after reading it she explained that it was from her sister, who had been at the hospital, situated at Harrington, Labrador, for four years, as a co-worker with Dr. Greenfield, the well known and world esteemed missionary doctor, who has given the best years of his life to the work of ministering to the people of bleak and barren Labrador. He began this great work single-handed and without the financial means necessary to afford the best service, but his self-sacrifice brought results; he now has a corps of well-trained medical assistants and trained nurses, and a force of teachers in charge of the schools he has established, and his name is known and blessed all over Labrador and territory contiguous, as well as over the civilized world.

As fellow passengers we have a number of missionaries and delegates to the World's Missionary Conference to be held at Edinburgh, Scotland, and I have a fellow passenger who is a delegate from the State of New York to the World's Congress to meet at Berne, Switzerland, and to which I am a delegate.

Next Day.

When we reached open water, that is, the Atlantic Ocean, troubles began. These troubles were more unpleasant than serious. The wind was from the north and it struck our good steamship broadside. It was not a gale; no, not even a half gale, but results were self-evident. Most of the passengers took their seats at the breakfast table but that was about all they took. They did not taste; the smell of the cooked food more than satisfied them; the corners of their mouths began to droop, their countenances took on a blanched look; their lips had a bluish tinge and they sought solitude in their state rooms and the attendance of the room stewards or stewardesses, when they could reach these heavens of safety and rest, but alas and alas, in many instances they could get no farther than the high rails to cast bread upon the waters. The roll of the ship was so discomforting that only a small percentage of the passengers reported at lunch time, and the outlook for the future is not reassuring as the wind continues to come from the north, and the rolling motion effects sensitive stomachs much more unpleasantly than an upward and downward motion fore and aft.

I suppose that in Greencastle and vicinity you are having "corn weather", and that in the day time it is unpleasantly warm; on the Atlantic we are having a temperature that reminds one of harvesting ice. Winter underwear, "top-coats" and warm gloves are necessary to passable comfort, and if the luxury of a dick chair is indulged, located in a sheltered nook on the main deck, only a heavy steamer rug will keep you sufficiently warm for comfort. There is no monotony in life on ship board—a day or two at sea does away with formalities and the passengers grow social; soon every fellow knows who every other fellow is, where he hails from, what he is going to do and where he is going to go, how long he is going to stay, what arrangements he has made for the home trip, etc., and the hours and days go swiftly by. In fact the experiences of a voyage are in reality:

"A life on the ocean wave,
A home of the rolling deep,
Where scattered waters heave
And the winds their revels keep."

Later some more—those whose appetites had failed; those with woe begone countenance; those who said to the deck steward, when he offered them chicken broth and biscuits, "go away and let me die;" and those who mildly remarked, "I do not feel fit to—"

OLD LONDON INNS.

Some That Are Famous Because of a Special Dish.

Though various restaurants in New York, Washington, New Orleans or San Francisco are famous for certain dishes, yet this is generally the result of accident rather than design that one article upon the menu should be pre-culminently successful and popular. The day is past when this one dish could make the reputation of the place.

In London, however, this is not the case, though it must be confessed that there are not now as many inns as formerly which have become famous by reason of the popularity of one dish. In times gone by every London inn of any pretensions at all had its special dish wherein it prided itself and to partake of which patrons traveled many miles.

Eel pies were once the great feature of breakfast served at the old Sluce House, near Finsburg park. The necessary quantity of fish was regularly dredged up from the stream which ran under the windows of the inn. The pies are still to be had, but the eels are procured from a nearby fish market.

Simpson's, in the Strand, is noted for its fish dinners. This place was once immensely popular, and even today there is a certain following who swear by its repasts. For a certain sum the guest eats as much of a variety of fish as he cares to.

Another inn boasts of a special dish in the shape of Southdown mutton. This is wheeled up to the table in order that each individual may select the particular cut to which he is partial. The mutton is kept warm by means of water heated by a lamp.

THE RIVER NILE.

Egypt Would Be a Wilderness But For This Wonderful Stream.

The Nile is probably the most wonderful river in the world. It has made Egypt possible by turning an arid wilderness into the richest land in the world. It has provided at the same time an admirable commercial highway and made easy the transportation of building materials. The ancient Egyptians were thus enabled to utilize the granite of Assuan for the splendid structures of the hundred gated Thebes and of Memphis and even for those on Etna, on the Mediterranean coast.

At a time when the people of the British Isles were clad in skins of wild beasts and offered human sacrifices upon the stone altars of the Druids Egypt was the center of a rich and refined civilization. Most of the development of Egypt was due to the Nile, which not only watered and fertilized the soil annually, but was and is one of the best natural highways in the world.

From the beginning of winter to the end of spring—that is, while the Nile is navigable the north wind blows steadily on the stream with sufficient force to drive sailing boats against the current at a fair pace, while, on the other hand, the current is strong enough to carry a boat without sails down against the wind except when it blows a gale. That is why the ancient Egyptians did not need steam power nor electric motors for the immense commerce that covered the Nile nor for barges carrying building materials for hundreds of miles.—New York Herald

The Uses of Rubber.

It is probable that no other commodity ever came into such varied use within so short a period as India rubber. First employed practically for footwear and other waterproof apparel, rubber has come to be employed in electric insulation, hose pipes for the conveyance of water, steam, air and so on; pneumatic and other tires for all sorts of wheeled vehicles, balloons and the planes of aerial machines, innumerable articles for the comfort of invalids, household conveniences and what not. Thus far rubber has never come into use to an important extent for any given purpose to which it is not still devoted. In other words, its advantages are so marked in many uses that when once introduced no substitute can be found for it.—Cassell's Magazine

Odd Hair Styles.

Some of the New Hebrides people do their hair up in a bunch on the top of the head and stain it yellow, while the inhabitants of the Ombai Islands pass it all through a tube so as to make a kind of plume. The Marquesas chief's favorite method is to shave all the head except two patches, one over each temple, where he cultivates two horns of hair. No doubt this is to render him more a thing of terror to his enemies than admiration to his friends. His reason for shaving the rest of the head is to allow more space for tattooing, as if all the available skin of the body were not enough.

Explained.

"Our air mattresses," said the dealer, "are all filled in the months of April and May. That accounts for their remarkable resilient qualities."
"Is the air of those months better than others?"
"They are the spring months, you know."—Exchange.

Justice.

The only way to make the mass of mankind see the beauty of justice is by showing them in pretty plain terms the consequence of injustice.—Sydney Smith.

Progress is the activity of today and the assurance of tomorrow.—Emerson day," etc., are reporting for duty at meals. Two days ago, at our table, only six appeared when the meal bugles sounded; this morning nineteen out of the twenty seats were occupied, and all appeared to tackle their porridge, broiled sea bass, fresh eggs poached, with manly and comely appetites. There are signs also of the approach of land—sailors are fixing the tackle to hoist the baggage out of the hold, the bed room stewards and stewardesses are noticeably more attentive, the deck steward is studiously polite and obliging in fixing the deck chairs and arranging the steamer rugs for the comfort of passengers; to command their most respectful attendance and best service; the bath steward is also up and doing his best; and all this because "tipping" time approaches. The tip is also attracting the attention of passengers new to an ocean trip; they are anxious to get wise as to the proper amount to donate when the employees range up to be "remembered". A schedule of what is passably proper in tips is said to be as follows: Steward, $2.50; Stewardess, $2.50; Dining Room Steward, $1.50; Bath Steward, $1.50; Deck Steward, $2.00. Of course, if you have to pose as a "good fellow" you can double or treble these figures and some soft headed individuals with plethoric purses do; item: we do not. The tip is an exorcism that should be eradicated; it is a sort of black mail levied upon the public by reason of the fact that rich corporations illy pay employees.

We have met a number of very pleasant and interesting people abroad, among them Dr. and Mrs. Nunn, of Texas; he has been engaged in educational work all his life, until very recently, and he is seeking renewed health by resting and travel. We have also met with us Sister Gertrude Margaret, of St. Margarets home, Montreal, a benevolence of the Episcopal church; she is a most estimable lady, with guilelessness and goodness plainly expressed in her look and act; she is away from the

There is a bunch of doctors aboard hailing from Chicago, Cincinnati, London, Ontario, Kamicope, British Columbia and elsewhere, on pleasure and the acquisition of wisdom bound, and they flock together like birds of a feather. We have also aboard clergymen of many varied sects and denominations and they do not flock together, nay, verily they do not. The feminine delegates to the international missionary convention to be held in Edinburgh, have formed a sort of mutual admiration society, discuss missions before breakfast, after breakfast and all the day long, until the bugle sounds out at 10 p. m., except when they foolishly fritter time away pitching quoits on deck and the devotees of the smoking room consume cigarettes, cigars, 'alf and 'alf, bars pole, Dublin Stout, Scotch and so forth and the days go altogether too quickly, but the majority kill time gazing at the white caps and, if they feel uncomfortable about the stomach gaze upon the sea gulls and wish they could fly.

Strong Coolies.

The power of endurance of the Chinese coolie is marvelous. Many will travel over forty miles, carrying a heavy load on their backs, and think nothing of it. A writer mentions the case of certain coolies who, after going twenty-seven hours without food and having carried a heavy burden in the meantime, still had strength enough left to offer to carry a man fifteen miles farther.
